History

The history of the Lublin Museum dates back to the beginning of the 20th century, and is associated with Hieronim Łopaciński, a junior high school teacher and a correspondent of the Academy of Learning, amateur historian, ethnographer, bibliophile and lover of antiquity.^[1] Thanks to his efforts in 1901, two exhibitions were organized in Lublin.^[1] The exhibition of art and antiquities was opened on June 4th in the former Dominican Monastery.^[1] Approximately 4,000 exhibits were assembled - engravings, paintings, sculptures, decorative arts, documents, prints, manuscripts, excavated artefacts, guild artefacts, arms, coins, medals, stamps and maps.^[1] The industrial and agricultural exhibition was opened on June 22nd with ethnographic section where folk costumes, wooden products and ritual art were presented.^[1] In 1974, the premises of the Lublin Castle were adapted for the needs of the District Museum in Lublin, established in 1950.^[1] The permanent exhibitions of painting, decorative arts, armaments, archeological, ethnographic and numismatic artefacts were opened.^[1] In 1987 the museum was renamed the Lublin Museum.^[1]

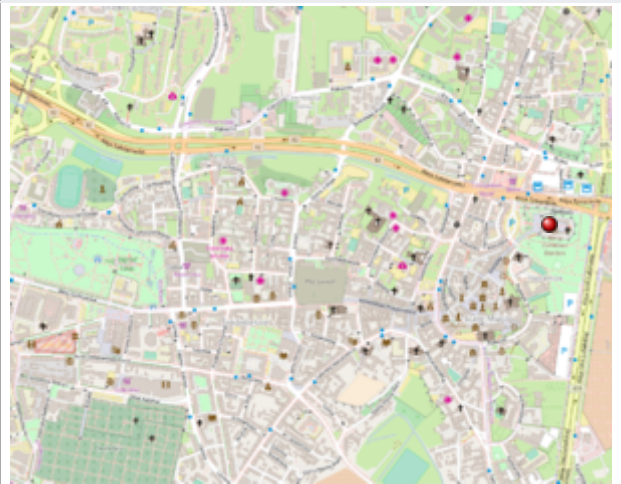

It has permanent collections for:

- Polish and foreign painting from the 17th to 20th century;
- Polish and foreign decorative arts;
- Polish historical and battle paintings;
- Painters and folk art from the Lublin Region;
